'Pomander Walk' Well Presented by Students

High School Boys and Girls Fitted Old English Comedy Characters to a Nicety and Big Audience Was Amply Rewarded.

"Pomander Walk" as given by the Senior Class of Kingston High School, before a very large and delighted audience Friday evening, was amazingly clever as to every detail of production and quaint and charming withal. Moreover being an old English play with no precedent other than one's imagination to draw from in the acting, it was an exceedingly difficult play to give, yet it was given with a finish and a spirit that would have elicited the heartiest of applause for professionals!

Nor can too much praise be given to those who prepared the picturesque, pretty and unique stage scenery under the direction of Mr. Hermann, for "Pomander Walk," was a place as well as a name to conjure with.

The program for the evening opened with music by the High School Orchestra, R. Spaulding, supervisor of music, conductor. The orchestra also pleasingly entertained the audience during the intermission.

When the curtains were finally drawn, there was Pomander Walk, its five identical little houses, with their five identical little gardens and the big elm in front of them all, sheltering its lover's seat; there, too, was,—well, let's call it a bower of roses, because that is what the folks who lived on Pomander Walk didn't call it—and in the background was the sea which was somewhat hidden by "The Eyesore," and his fishing antics.

But charming as Pomander Walk was, it needed the charming people who lived there to really complete the fascination, and in the first act the audience was delighted to make the acquaintance of Sir Peter Antrobus, the doughty admiral who had more regard for his admiralty than knowledge of women, and who was presented to perfection by John Palen. He and his "Boatswain" "Jim" lived in Number 1. In Number 2 lived plump and pretty, if gray-haired Mrs. Pamela Poskett (Miss Frances Miller) a charming widow with her beloved pussy-cat, the foe of Sir Peter's thrush. Past matrimonial experience, a neat income, a woman's will and propinquity finally brought the redoubtable admiral to warily setting sail on the sea of matrimony with the widow as first mate.

Number III, of Pomander Walk housed the antique as well as antiquarian, Rev. Jacob Sternroyd, D. D., F. S. A. (Eric Brown), who yet possessed enough of a heart of youth to help straighten out the matrimonial tangle of Pomander Walk, by means of, not one, but several marriage licenses. But poor man, one could but sympathize with him in the perpetual feeling that someone had moved his house, when quite through preoccupation, he stumbled into the abode of Miss Ruth Pennymint (Spinster) (Miss Helen Heiser) and her younger and very pretty sister, Miss Barbara Pennymint (Miss Kathryn Dean). And how much the play would have missed without the caustic remarks of the elder Miss Pennymint, who still was ready for helping love affairs though she did not sorely tried with man's slowness and woman's stupidity. Sweet little Miss Barbara furnished her full share of charming romance as she naively taught "Dr. Johnston," a bird, the gift of a dead lover, to help her cure the bashfulness of Basin Pringle (Clarke Snyder), the youthful music master who also shared their cottage on Pomander Walk, and who was certainly quite "interesting."

A very important figure on Pomander Walk was the pompous, "Friend-of-the-Nobility" personage, Jerome Brooke-Hoskyn, Esq., admirably taken by Fred Dressel. In fact the Hon. Brooke-Hoskyn, Esq., who later proved to be the old butler of the Tenth Baron of Oxford, with wisdom to know that it is "better to be first in a little Iberian village than second in Rome," was one of the best characters of the evening's play.

But the most fascinating, perhaps the most important people on Pomander Walk, as far as the plot went were the people who lived in Number V, the only house having white instead of green paint. They were the gracious, dignified Madame Lucie Lachenais (Miss Estelle Rodgers) and her most winsome, captivating daughter, Mlle. Marjolaine Lachenais (Miss Margaret Rodie), together with her picturesque maid "en costume" Nanette (Miss Ida Briggs).

Too much praise cannot be given both Miss Rodie, the heroine of the play, who was perfect as a sweet, pretty natural and altogether lovable miss of just-past sweet sixteen, the love and pride of Pomander Walk, while Miss Estelle Rodgers was everything that one could ask for in a beautiful, stately woman and loving mother who still carried the heart of a girl, particularly when she refused to mind her first love whom she did not marry.

Then there was a group of people who just touched the edge of life at Pomander Walk, but added much to the completeness of the performance. Chief among these was "The Eyesore" (Blair Muller) who apparently camped out where Pomander Road turns toward the sea, and who spent his time in fishing and doing curious stunts that kept the audience in merriment in a sort of by-play. "Jane" (Miss Louise Polhemus), was the faithful nurse-maid of the Brooke-Hoskyn family, very realistic; "The Muffin Man" (Lester Caunitz) who caused the happy diversion that saved a delicate situation for the lovers of the story; "The Lamplighter" (Sam Rosenthal) who carefully lighted the little street lamps and then as carefully put them out when the moon rose, and the real violinist, Maurice Baker.

But self-sufficient as Pomander Walk seemed, it took three important characters from the outside world to create the exciting situations that ended in the final "They lived happily ever afterward."

They were "John Sayle, Tenth Baron of Oxford," (John Bott), the worldly minded father of the hero; the first love of Madame Lachenais, a courtly gentleman bent upon making a marriage between his son and "The Hon. Caroline Thring" (Miss Anne Byrne) a welfare worker who with good intent and no tact invaded Pomander Walk greatly to its indignation. Miss Byrne was indeed excellent. In order to secure help in his scheme for his son's future, the Tenth Baron of Oxford visited his old friend, Sir Peter Antrobus, under whom the son was a petty officer and for whom Sir Peter had an especial fondness. He helped all right, but not as the father had planned. Of course before the curtain fell, John Sayle, Tenth Baron of Oxford, discovered that the fascinating Madame who lived at Pomander Walk was his first—and always—sweetheart and they, too, called upon their clerical friend for a "license."

And the hero! "Lieutenant, Hon. John Sayle, R. W" (Le Van Haver) who on his visit to his old admiral, Sir Peter, for aid in escaping the marriage with the Hon. Caroline, discovered sweet Marjolaine, won all hearts as a persistent, devoted, clever lover should, and later he won the hand of petite Mademoiselle and the two lovers whom all loved welcomed to their ranks their respective father and mother; the admiral Sir Peter and Mrs. Poskett; pretty Barbara Pennymint and Mr. Basil Pringle, while Miss Pennymint and Nanette from their quaint chamber windows added their blessing to that of the Rev. Sternroyd, D. D., F. S. A., as the curtain fell.

The realism of the play was greatly enhanced by the beautiful and appropriate costumes of all of the actors every one of whom was passing excellent.

During the first intermission, Arthur Flemming, in behalf of the class but quite unnecessarily bespoke the indulgence of the audience for the Senior play and expressed for the class their appreciation of all the untiring effort and skilled support given by those who had so faithfully and carefully done the coaching for the play, Miss Carter, Miss Noone and Miss Baragwanath, each of whom was presented with a beautiful bouquet. Sincere thanks were also expressed by Mr. Flemming to all others who had in any way worked toward the success of the performance. During the evening several charming Senior girls in white frocks with maroon jackets —very chic—sold candy to their guests.

Pomander Walk will long be remembered and will always be a real pleasure in the remembering.

BREAK AT GENOA NOW LESS LIKELY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Genoa, May 6.—Plainly elated over the success of his home visit, Louis Barthou, head of the French delegation to the international economic conference, arrived here today from Paris. The French leader evidently had no fears that the fresh instructions he brought back with him would wreck the conference. His face was wreathed in smiles as he shook hands with newspaper correspondents and conference delegates at the station. He went immediately to the Savoy Hotel to confer with his colleagues, leaving word that he would see Premier Lloyd-George of England later in the day

German intervention to bring Russia to terms is regarded in some circles as the first step towards a triple entente involving Russia, Britain and Germany—a consummation which France has feared for a long time.

Premier Lloyd-George's action in entering into a tacit "bargain" with Germany, is believed to have been directed against the possibility of concerted action by M. Barthou and Premier Poincare of France against Great Britain.

It is understood that the Russians are now ready to give their answer to the Allied statement of conditions for recognition of the Moscow government and that they will express their readiness to continue negotiations. This emphasizes the fact that while some of the nations are ready to bring the conference to the breaking point, none is willing to bring about the actual collapse.

Bridge Lighted All Night Despite Delay In Esopus

Kingston Gas & Electric Company Donating Current For Lamps On Esopus End Until Someone Is Found To Pay For It—Company Met Emergency Caused By Opening On Short Notice.

One problem in connection with the Rondout Creek Bridge that remains to be solved is the adequate lighting of the approach on the Esopus side, which will have to be taken care of either by the town of Esopus or the Port Ewen lighting district. No doubt this will be done as soon as possible. At present nothing can be done in the way of erecting poles, for the reason that while the road is open, it is not completed. On May 10 a special election is to be held in Esopus to decide on whether or not to build a sidewalk along the bridge road. Until this is decided and the location of the walk, if any is to be built, determined, no poles can be erected.

The city authorities are paying for the 13 lights on the Kingston part of the bridge itself, but up to date nobody is paying for the seven lights on the Esopus part of the bridge, which are being lighted by the Kingston Gas and Electric Company at its own expense.

Owing to the fact that the bridge was opened on very short notice, favorable weather having enabled Contractor to expedite the final topdressing of the road beyond expectation, the bridge came very near not being lighted at all the first night The Board of Public Works was not notified until Wednesday morning that the bridge would be opened that night and the Gas and Electric Company was notified at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning to turn on the current. Every available man was at once put at work making the necessary connections, installing a transformer, etc.

The lamps and standards are a part of the bridge and the property of the state. They had not all been installed some of the globes and bulbs being stored in the vault under the pier. This was locked and the custodian of the key was in New York city for the day. He was pursued and located by telephone late in the afternoon and permission obtained to break into the vault and take out the necessary supplies, which were not in place until 6 o'clock. The lights were turned on in time, but owing to the rush in which the work was done some of the wiring was of a temporary nature and at midnight one of the wires broke, putting all of the lights on the bridge out of commission for the night.

Thursday permanent wiring was completed and the lights burned brightly that night and all night, have been burning every night since and will continue to do so.

The cost of maintaining the seven lights that are on the Esopus part of the bridge is $270 a year. The cost of maintaining lights along the approach on the Esopus side, when it is possible to install them, will be about the same amount. Kingston has promptly provided for its share of the lighting. It is now up to Esopus to do the same. In the meantime, through the generosity and public spirit of the Kingston Gas and Electric Company, the Esopus part of the bridge is lighted every night and all night.

NEW CONDUIT IN O'REILLY ST.

High Tension Electric Wires to Be Placed Underground from Distributing Station to Marys Avenue.

The working of digging a trench for the underground conduit to be built under O'Reilly street, from Jansen avenue to Marys avenue, in which to place the high tension wires of the Kingston Gas and Electric Company, has been begun. There is no intention of placing all wires underground, as the cost of such work would be prohibitive in a city covering so much territory as does Kingston.

At a meeting of the Board of Public Works on Saturday, April 29th, Mr. Acker, general superintendent of the company stated that one of the first moves in the general reconstruction work which the company is carrying on would be the removal from its pole line on West O'Reilly street to the 33,000 volt high tension line which connects the city with its source of supply, and also of the 13,200 volt transmission line supplying large power consumers in Rondout and Port Ewen.

At that time the company applied for permission to dig up East and West O'Reilly streets from Jansen avenue to Mary's avenue in order to install underground ducts to accommodate these lines. This action on the part of the company will eliminate a bad condition and provide for the maximum of safety to the public.

In connection with the primary and secondary distribution system on the streets of the city, the company is planning to clean up conditions in general by removing, where possible, the heavy lines from the main streets and eliminating unnecessary poles, working at all times toward the establishment of a standard overhead distribution system such as exists in cities of this size throughout the country, but does not of course, placing all wires underground.

BROKERS PAY SHIMER FOR STOCK

One Of Cases Arising Out Of Kline Failure Here Settled—Only One Not Tried in Court.

The case of Alexander Shimer against John D. Kline, C. H. Van Buren and another, which has been on the calendar of the Supreme Court for some time, it being brought against the defendants to recover for the value of ten shares of Brooklyn Rapid Transit stock which the plaintiff claimed the defendants converted to their own use, has been settled. This transaction arose out of the dealings of John D. Kline who ran a brokerage office in the Warren building, on Fair street. There have been several suits brought against C. H. Van Buren and this is the only one which has been settled without a trial, the defendants paying the plaintiff the amount they received for the stock.

William D. and William D. Brinnier, Jr., were the attorneys for Mr. Shimer and Sullivan & Cromwell of New York city, with Judge A. T. Clearwater of counsel were the attorneys for C. H. Van Buren and another.

WILBUR LOST.

Rondout Boys Did Some Fine Ball Playing.

The Wilbur Nine were defeated in a game of baseball played on the Andrew street grounds this morning. Tom McCardle caught an exceptionally good game for the Wilbur team. His batting and throwing was also fine. He got a hit every time he was at bat, and knocked a two bagger in the sixth inning. F. Schick also held up his end by pitching a fine game. Otherwise Wilbur's team was weak. The game was one-sided and would have been a shut-out for Wilbur had not McCardle crossed the plate.

The batteries for the winners were S. Connelly, pitcher, and Dickson, catcher. The Rondout boys did some fine playing. Both teams will play at Wilbur next Saturday, 9:30 a. m.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

TREE FROGS

"Sometimes we wear green suits and sometimes brown and sometimes gray and sometimes somewhat of a mixture of these," said Master Tree Frog.

"We're supposed to be weather prophets. Weather prophets are those who say what the weather is going to be. There are some of my relatives who have boasted they could do this. Some of them have indeed boasted and bragged of this.

"But I don't. I don't want to be a weather prophet because it is too much like work!

"Not that I object to work, but I don't care for that kind of work. No, thank you. I want to work and not be complained of and if one is trying to tell what the weather is going to be one is always complained of if one is not right.

"Old Man Weather himself doesn't know what he is going to do. Sometimes he plans his days ahead, but not always, not always by any manner of means.

"You see like to come around during damp, wet weather, and we come around before storms. We really are especially fond of damp weather and of wet weather and we like to be about then.

"That is the reason why members of my family have been called weather prophets. Because, you see, when people saw some of us about or heard us singing or making our funny little purring sounds they would say,

"'There comes a tree frog. It must be going to rain.'

"Usually it did too. That is true enough. But to consider one's self a weather prophet is too much of a good thing. I don't mind being a kind of half weather prophet but not a whole one.

"Trees Are So Nice."

"I have rather an ugly square head and my body is very fat and dumpy looking. But then I do not care about looks.

"I have teeth on my upper jaw of which I am quite proud. I am not unduly proud of them though and why should I be? Teeth are very nice but there are other things in life more wonderful.

"The lady tree frogs have smaller ears than we have which is nice because it is ladylike, or frog-ladylike to have small ears. Then they do not have to listen to too much idle chatter.

"Of course that isn't what we do because we have big ears, but I am telling of the difference in our ears chiefly because the lady and gentlemen common tree frogs are so much alike. We have darker throats than they have too, I might add.

"We're fine hunters and we like the night-time in which to hunt.

"We can see all the caterpillars and beetles and bugs and insects for we have good eyesight. Some creatures are thankful they have good eyesight because they like to read a lot, but the tree frogs are glad of good eyesight because they can get fine meals that way.

"We move quickly, jumping for the things we want to eat, and catching them easily with our sticky tongues.

"Trees are so nice. All kinds of bugs and insects come to them, ready to be eaten.

"They may not think that way when they come along but after I've eaten them or after some of my relatives have I say to myself,

"'Ah, they came just in time for dinner!'

"Then in the trees are nuts too and little creatures which like the different parts of the trees.

"There are some which come in bad weather and some which come in good weather.

"So we're almost always apt to have good food.

"It's a great thing to be able to live where there are good markets and good food and the tree frog is one who knows that good food not only makes strong boys and girls and men and women but tree frogs too.

"I must be hopping off now and having a meal. I've spent too much time in chatting and talking.

"Yes I must hop, hop, hop
For a bit, bite, bite,
For I'll sleep like a top,
If I eat late tonight!"

GOOD DESSERTS FOR FOUR

Often the recipe prepared will be sufficient for five to six; the following will be helpful, for no frugal housewife wishes to overfeed or waste good food.

Date Pudding.—Stone and chop one-half pound of dates, put them on the back part of the stove with three cupfuls of water. When cooked down to the thickness of cornstarch pudding, set away to become cold. Serve with whipped cream and sweetened with powdered sugar.

Cracker Pudding.—Take four soda crackers rolled fine, add two cupfuls of milk, a quarter of a cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt, two eggs beaten lightly. Mix well and add a handful of raisins or two or three prunes. Bake until the custard is firm. Cover the top with the white of egg mixed with sugar—one egg white may be reserved for this. Flavor with grated lemon rind. Brown the meringue.

Coconut Pudding.—Place a teaspoonful of coconut in the bottom of individual glasses and make a custard of two cupfuls of milk, the yolk of one egg and one-half of a tablespoonful of cornstarch with three teaspoonfuls of sugar. Pour the custard over the coconut after it is cooked and cool. Serve with the white of the egg beaten stiff and a little sugar added, on top.

Lemon Rice Pudding.—Wash and cook one-third of a cupful of rice in the following sirup: Put the grated rind and juice of a lemon with one-third of a cupful each of sugar and water in a saucepan; when boiling add the rice. Cook until soft. Put the cooked rice with three cupfuls of milk and more sugar if needed into a baking dish, adding a little salt. Bake two hours, allowing it to brown slightly at the last. Serve hot or cold.

Cornflake Macaroons.—Take one cupful each of sugar, cornflakes, ground nuts and two tablespoonfuls of flour, a little salt and flavoring of vanilla. Beat until stiff two egg whites, add the sugar gradually, then the cornflakes, nuts and flour. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven until a delicate brown.

The ostrich is certainly a bird at making excuses: it really takes the plume, if we can credit the Arabians. They call it the camel bird, and in one of their sayings it took advantage of the name in this manner: "They said to the camel bird, 'Carry.' It said: 'I cannot, for I am a bird.' They said: 'Then fly!' It answered: 'I cannot, for I am a camel.'"—Boston Transcript.

When Headaches Are Conquered

Saturday Health Talk No. 82.
By Froude & MacKinnon.

When headaches are conquered and good health returns, the woman of many complaints and little charm becomes a person of vivacity and happiness. The transformation is a natural one and yet many sufferers from nervous headache have come to believe health is not for them.

Headaches are of various kinds, but the nervous headache usually is accompanied by nausea and vomiting with evidence of liver and stomach disorder. Where the case is chronic rather than one due to temporary overeating, there is certain to be found a spinal condition making chiropractic spinal adjustments a necessity if the cause of the ailment is to be removed and any degree of permanent good health obtained.

FREEMAN WANT ADS. BRING RESULTS

MRS. EDWARDS'S D. A. R. REPORT

The report of Mrs. Oscar Edwards, one of the delegates from Wyncoyk Chapter, D. A. R., to the recent Continental Congress in Washington, as read to the May meeting of the chapter, was as follows:

On Monday, April 17th, Washington welcomed 2,700 women delegates to the Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, a great gathering of women from every state of the union, two from Hawaii and one from the Orient. Every hotel keeper, policeman and taxi cab man wore his annual smile in anticipation of the harvest of dollars sure to be reaped in the capital city. Just 30 years before, in 1892, the first Continental Congress of the D. A. R. was held in the Church of Our Father, beginning February 22, 1892. Several hundred delegates were present and the goodly customs of yearly congresses was auspiciously inaugurated. A few words of the history of the organization will not come amiss. There was a dear old lady among the delegates, Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood of Washington, whose impassioned story of Hannah Arnett, a heroine of the Revolution printed on July 18th, 1890, aroused national interest and proved the beginning of the great national society which has claimed the loyalty of nearly 200,000 women.

On October 11, 1890, at Mrs. Lockwood's home, the great society was organized with 18 women present became its first members that afternoon. Mrs. Caroline Scott Harrison, wife of Benjamin Harrison, then president of the United States, was elected president general. It was decided that it was to be a national organization and the invitation was sent to all women of Revolutionary descent to join. The society grew by leaps and bounds and in April, 1904, the cornerstone was laid for the beautiful Continental Memorial Hall. On April 18, 1910, it became the actual headquarters of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution. In April, 1917, the final payment was made on the hall. Since then the society has turned its attention to patriotic education and the preservation of the practical ideals of American life. One cannot fail to be inspired by the wonderful addresses and discussions of a week spent in Continental Hall, made famous by the gathering of the nations at the disarmament conference last winter. The hall was gay with flags and decorated with flowers and crowded to the doors. As the bugle call announced the coming of the 141 pages escorting Mrs. Minor to the platform and these words of the Washington Post describe the scene which one must see to fully appreciate. The conference was assembled promptly at 10:30 o'clock by a bugle call by Arthur S. Witcomb, of the United States Marine Band. Immediately afterward, amid rounds of almost deafening applause, Mrs. Minor and the national officers, escorted by 141 white clad pages, entered the hall and marched to the platform. Mrs. Minor was at the end of the procession and carried a beautiful bouquet of red roses.

Virtually every seat in the large auditorium was filled with the 2,700 accredited delegates and alternates when the congress was called to order by the president general. The crowd grew constantly and by the time Mrs. Minor had completed her address many were standing in the gallery despite the fact that for the first time in history the general public was barred from the opening session.

Boxes over the stage were occupied by the former national officers of the society and invited guests. The national officers had seats on the platform. After scripture and prayer and a flag salute Mrs. Minor began her annual address with a strong plea for a better nation, she scored slackers at home and at the polls and asserted that our democracy was assailed by yet another danger, the slacker vote, both male and female. There are startling statistics revealed by the last census, she said, which show that millions of the eligible voters in this country are too indifferent to go to the polls. Out of 54,421,832 eligible voters, 37,763,966 did not take the trouble to cast their vote, over one-half of our electorate, in other words failed in this most sacred duty of citizenship, and of this failure the women must bear their full share of responsibility. Is it any wonder that politics are corrupt, that selfish and cowardly men are in office all over the country for what they can get out of it? Is it any wonder that we face the disheartening spectacle of political cowards cringing under the whip of powerful groups demanding legislation under threats of loss of votes if it is refused? This political fear in high places is the curse of our country, but whose fault is it? And she urged that truth, fearlessness and faith in God are the greatest weapons against present evils, she spoke of Washington and Lincoln's religion, quoting Lincoln when he prayed in the black crisis of the civil war that he might be on God's side for God is always right, and President Harding in a recent speech when he said, no nation can prosper, no nation can survive if it forgets Almighty God. Speaking of education, "Far better for the child is the good old-fashioned training in the elements of a sound education and in the cardinal virtues of honesty, decency, integrity and truth than all the sumptuous modern schoolhouses you can build. Give him character and the good old fundamentals of a sound education; the high-brow superficialities will look out for themselves and will probably never be missed. Good homes, good schools—these are the nation's life, the very bone and sinew of a democracy within a republic. See that you maintain them throughout our land as the fathers bequeathed them to you, and pass them on to the foreigner within our gates. With friendliness and understanding let us teach the foreigner the ideals of the forefathers, that he too, may become American in thought and soul. Then may he become in fact one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all. And in closing her speech she quoted from President Harding in his farewell speech to the armament conference, "The torchlits of understanding have been lighted and they will glow and encircle the globe. This means an understanding among nations within our borders as well as throughout the world. It means trust and cooperation. It means that the greatest gift of the conference to the world has been spiritual gift.

I believe we have been called back after much wandering to a keener world conscience and a deeper faith in the government of God, for where men meet in the spirit of peace on earth, good will to men, there is God in the midst of them.

The rest of the morning was given over to reports and roll call, with one other interesting feature the address of Princess Cantacuzene the granddaughter of General Grant, standing there so straight and slim she made a passionate plea for Russia, the home of her adoption. Monday afternoon was given over to reports. But a wonderful treat was in store for Monday evening when Secretary Hughes, the French ambassador Monsieur Jusserand and Sir Aukland Geddes all brought greetings from their respective governments. Hughes's word swere of special interest.

"Some of our public men write and speak as though what they said of foreign governments could not be seen or heard outside the three mile limit," declared Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes. "Public opinion should demand of those who influence the public on the platform or through the press a sense of civic responsibility. Nothing is more regrettable than the apparent lack of it at the present time, and the only cure for intemperate statement is the resentment of an intelligent community.

Praises Spirit of Conference.

"Those who indulge in diatribes against foreign peoples and their governments who hold them up to ridicule, impute to them base motives and asperse their honor, are enemies first of their own countries, and as such, deserve their censure." In his opening phrases, Mr. Hughes thanked the society for the loan of their hall and pointed out the true significance of the recent conference is to be found in the fact that there has never been manifested a finer spirit of international cooperation than was evinced by the nations whose representatives assembled in this hall.

Praises Arms Reduction.

Introducing Ambassador Jusserand, Mrs. Minor declared that there is no moral isolation for the defenders of justice and liberty. At the close of Mrs. Minor's introduction, the ambassador rose amidst a tremendous burst of applause.

Stressing the construction and significance of Memorial Continental Hall, M. Jusserand told the congress that France had been practicing the spirit that convened the conference before invitations were ever issued. In these halls a new tablet is just being placed, he said, recalling their own laying of a tablet presented by France to Memorial Continental Hall, a new tablet to commemorate these treaties, so magnificently handled by your president and Secretary Hughes to commemorate a new system of good will inaugurated among the nations.

I venture to suppose that few people know that France was the only nation to precede before the practice of the principle of the conference before the arms parley was held. Capital ships belonging to France were destroyed before the initial meeting of the conference. Now since the delegates have gone home. France will hold to her promise incorporated in the treaties, he explained.

Thanks Daughters.

He said the Daughters had done much for France, cared for their orphans, and supplied a water system for a village, "Made French by Americans." American women by their administrative ability have chosen a very unique way of helping to re-establish this village. They argued that they had best provide that which the government would not and therefore selected the water system. At the conclusion of Ambassador Jusserand's speech, Mrs. Minor presented a marine painting, "France," to be placed in the Invalides in Paris, drawn by Frederick J. Waugh, in the name of the Daughters.

Tuesday, 18th.

Tuesday morning was given over to reports and most interesting was that of Mrs. Guernsey upon the new administration building.

Plan Administration Offices.

A loan of $185,450 was urged to complete the administration building now under construction, by Mrs. George Thacher Guernsey, chairman of the administration building and former president general, in her report yesterday morning. The sum, she said, is necessary to complete the edifice, on which $187,061.34 has already been spent. This building, she explained, is about 75 feet west of Memorial Continental Hall, is 110 feet wide and 100 feet deep. It is planned as a business building, executed in white limestone, in harmony with, but properly subordinated to Memorial Hall. The work is progressing satisfactorily, she declared, and according to authoritative comment, splendidly made in material and workmanship.

Tuesday afternoon many Daughters journeyed to Arlington, burdened with many large and beautiful wreaths of flowers, which were placed upon the grave of the Unknown Soldier. The services were most impressive. Mrs. Minor's address was as always appropriate and timely as always. We shall not break faith, America shall keep the faith as long as a wayside cross remains standing in England and the fields of crosses gleam white in France. We have fought side by side with the freedom loving nations of the earth, and we shall hold to them in peace that the fruits of victory be made secure.

Here at the grave of our unknown dead, we dedicate ourselves once more to the high ideals for which our allies and ourselves have given our sons. We offer them a nation's gratitude and reverence through the women who by their ancestry and their heritage are pre-eminently pledged to perpetuate the ideals of liberty and justice and national honor, she concluded. And the solemn benediction was pronounced after state regents had silently laid their offering upon the tomb. You may be interested in seeing the pictures which were then taken.

Tuesday at 5:30 the New York state meeting was held in the New Willard followed by the dinner at 7:30, a nominating committee was elected to prepare a ticket for state officers to be elected at Poughkeepsie next October. Later at 9 o'clock all adjourned to Continental Hall, where the annual reception was held.

Many beautiful gowns made the scene a rainbow of color against the white walls of the auditorium. It was a gay crowd and forgotten for the moment were the cares of legislation and partisan politics and smiles wreathed every face. In fact it was a fashion show and the social historian present must have recorded it as a well dressed multitude of representative American women. Paris creations vied with the painstaking endeavors of the village dressmakers. That the bobbed hair craze has begun insidious march on the ranks of the Daughters of the American Revolution was apparent as here and there in the line was one whose locks had been cut neatly.

Some Beautiful Costumes.

After the Daughters passed down the line they took seats in the body of the auditorium where they could enjoy the pageant as it wended its way past the receiving line. Mrs. Minor was beautifully gowned in blue satin over which was silver and gold brocade. With this costume she carried an old fashioned bouquet of spring flowers.

Wednesday morning we awoke to a pouring rain and the taxis did a rushing business as the faithful Daughters paid no heed to the flowing heavens but found their seats in the hall. I wish I had time to tell you of the wonderful reports of that morning, the usual magazine report showed how very, very few Daughters read this most excellent resume of the D. A. R. work. The committee on international relations brought a resolution, urging the maintenance of the army and navy at its fil strength in order that they should be adequately prepared for the national defence and for enforcing all national obligations to the end that permanent peace may be maintained with safety and honor.

The committee on real Daughters reported that there were still 32 real Daughters living.

Wednesday afternoon was given over to patriotic education, which is the real work of the national society. Reports were received from all the schools and colleges to which the society contributes. They are: Tamassee D. A. R. School, Mrs. Fred H. H. Calhoun; Oxford College, Mrs. Austorin C. Brant; Schauffler Missionary Training School, David P. Simpson; International College, C. S McGown; Berea College, Mrs Elizabeth Erlberg; Maryville College, Miss Clemmie Henry, Southern Industrial Institute, Mrs. Benjamin D. Heath; Pine Mountain School, Mrs. C. A. Holton, Lincoln Memorial University, Mrs. Robert B. Parker.

It was voted that the manual for immigrants be continued for another year and that every daughter be asked to contribute 25 cents.

The name of "the Father of his Country" took on a new and larger significance when England, France gathered to do honor to our first of their accredited representatives, and the United States, in the persons president before his tomb at Mount Vernon.

Representing the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. George Maynard Minor laid a wreath upon Washington's sarcophagus. Standing at attention during the ceremony were Marshal Joffre, Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand, Gen. Keppell Bethell, military attache of the British Embassy, and other members of the French and British embassies.

Members of the congress of the D. A. R. were met at the dock by the hero of the Marne and his party. Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand accompanied the congress on the boat trip, and all marched solemnly to the tomb.

A large number of visitors to the estate watched the procession, which was headed by the handsome figure of Mrs. Minor, the Mount Vernon committee and the foreigners in their bright uniforms.

Marshal Joffre stood barehcaded while the Post Band from Camp Humphreys, Va., played Washington's favorite hymn, "Oh, Lord, Our Help in Ages Past," and "America."

Then Mrs. Minor and Mme. Jusserand proceeded within the tomb. The president general laid a wreath of white roses upon the tomb of Washington, and Mme. Jusserand a wreath of lilies upon that of Martha Washington.

"State papers of Washington have molded the character of the nation and directed its policies," Mrs. Minor pointed out in her speech.

Urging the Daughters to know more of Washington's words, she recalled his letter to the governors, saying "There are four things which I humbly conceive are essential to the well being, and I may even say, to the existence, of the United States as an independent power. First, an indissoluble union of the States under one Federal head. Second, a sacred regard for public justice. Third, the adoption of a proper peace establishment; and, fourth, the prevalence of that pacific and friendly disposition among the people of the United States which will induce them to forget their local prejudices and policies to make those mutual concessions which are requisite to the general prosperity, and in some instances to sacrifice their individual advantages to the interest of the community."

Gen. Bethell then laid a wreath upon the tomb, after which the procession moved down the road, and Ambassador Jusserand, Mme. Jusserand and Marshal Joffre together planted a tree, taken from an oak that flourished during Lafayette's time, at La Grange Castle, in France, the home of the distinguished Frenchman.

"Journals kept by Gen. Washington were striking in their attention to the birds and trees and things outdoors," said M. Jusserand in a brief address.

"I hope that his spirit will enjoy rest under this tree, planted as a token of love between France and the United States. This oak tree will grow and flourish after we are gone, and I hope the friendship it represents will survive long after the tree is gone."

Another tree was planted by Gen. Bethell, brought from Sulgrave Manor, the English ancestral home of the Washingtons. Both trees were given to the Ladies' Mount Vernon Association. After the tree planting, Miss Jean Winslow Coltrane, historian general, placed a wreath in the room Lafayette occupied in the mansion at Mount Vernon. Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howell, who was born in the great house, also laid a wreath.

A treaty-sized naty was formally indorsed by the congress at the morning session yesterday. A further resolution was passed indorsing an archives building for the storing of government records in Washington. The resolution had other features, including the approval of the Towner-Sterling education bill and the acquisition of Yorktown as a military park.

Wednesday evening there was an address and interpretation of music of Edward MacDowell, American composer, given by Mrs. MacDowell. Then followed an address by Henry Roe Cloud, principal of the American Indian Institute, who made a fine appearance.

Captain Arthur Guy Empey threw one verbal bombshell after another into the ranks of the delegates to the D. A. R. congress, during an address on America and what it means to Americans. He said, "I'm going to tell you something right now, because I think your organization is the most American organization in the whole country. You're not going to get anywhere with Americanization work unless you bring Americanism direct to the immigrant landing on the shores of this country." He said that first real Americans were those men who ran up that flag with a gesture toward the standard and nailed it to the staff from which it has floated ever since. I'm telling you that when thirteen stars and stripes went up the staff, that's when the first American started. Capt. Empey declared that the home must be made attractive, evil he said, must not have a greater magnetism. He appealed for the making of homes which would be more attractive to the young than any other place in the country. Suppose your ancestors did come over in the Mayflower, he said, that won't make any difference unless you live up to their ideals and carry on their work. Don't rest on what your ancestors did. Get out and give the people coming after you a chance to put up their tablets in your memory 100 years from now. Give them some reason to honor your memory. It is up to the American woman to teach the alien on our shores.

Thursday for Mrs. Fessenden.

Friday morning at nine o'clock voting for seven vice presidents began. Ten candidates were nominated the night before, interest was running high, voting continued throughout the day. Miss Alice McDuffee of Michigan received the highest vote, 1,035, the highest vote any woman has received in an election when a president general is not on the ballot. Others elected vice president general were: Mrs. John Laidlaw Buel, of Connecticut, with a vote of 1,008; Mrs. Frank Mondell of Wyoming, 1,015; Mrs Willard T. Block of Illinois, Miss Annie Wallace of New Hampshire, Mrs. H. H. McCall of Georgia, and Mrs. Ernest George Sewell, Florida, in all, 12,067 were cast.

Enthusiasm and suspense marked the attitude of the audience as Mrs George Maynard Minor, president general, on a stage cleared of officers and flowers preparatory to the subsequent program, introduced the teller, who read the election results. Prolonged applause greeted each pronouncement, and the successful officers bowed in response to the calls of the audience, thus making their first official appearance.

Will Investigate Histories.

Careful investigation of all history books in use in the public schools of the United States will be made by the committee on education. Important among the causes for this action by the society is undoubtedly the attack in the District of Columbia on Muzzey's History in use in the high schools. This text will be among those investigated.

The resolution introduced by the Indiana delegation pointed out that the American Legion has brought to attention numerous assertions in late histories written for use in public schools that convey misleading statements.

Resolutions were also passed for the purpose of aiding in the study of forestry and the preservation of trees, and indorsing the proposed restoration of the Washington ancestral home, Sulgrave Manor, in England.

Colorful Pageant Given.

At the close of the afternoon session the congress adjourned to the White House, where they were cordially received by the President and Mrs. Harding.

The History of America was displayed by the children as the feature of the eventful evening meeting. The pageant told the romantic story of America, the vision of the New World, giving the tale of Columbus; the colonies, exhibiting the life in the early days of the settlers; the stirring Revolutionary episodes, and a procession of Columbia receiving gifts from the states, showing this country looking forward. The music for the pageant was played by the Marine Band and the pageant was directed Marie Moore Forest aided by Mrs. Horace Mann Towner.

Explains C. A. R. Work.

Explanation of the work of the Children of the American Revolution was made by Mrs. Mondell, president of the organization, and Mrs. Daniel Lothrop, its founder.

Plans for the Soldiers' Institute were discussed by Henry K. Bush Brown. Miss Hermione Schweed recounted the conversion of a parlor socialist, warning the Daughters against socialism.

Alvin Owsley, director of Americanization of the American Legion, brought greetings from that organization, and thanked the society for the manual. "We must have sufficient strength, in our army and navy to defend our country, but we must now turn our minds to industrialism and patriotism of peace," he said.

Col. Walter Scott presented a gift of $1,000 to the society for its work.

Last Session Hour Long.

The concluding session was brief in comparison with the others—lasting only fifty-five minutes. In this time eight resolutions which had been introduced at preceding sessions were adopted and the seven new vice presidents general elected Friday, were formally installed.

The resolution favoring the movement for better film productions declared that "the low type of motion pictures is a menace to the future welfare of the nation." It was introduced Friday by Mrs. Edward L. Harris and favorably reported to the congress by the resolutions committee of which Mrs. Henry B. Joy is chairman.

The society voted to observe February 6th as "International Day," and to urge the various chapters to make a study of the relations of nations of the world in order that we may be helpful and helped by living in a world-wide observance of the golden rule.

After unanimously indorsing the movement for better motion picture productions and placing itself on record as favoring the name of Francis Scott Key for the new bridge across the Potomac river connecting Georgetown and Rosslyn, Va., the thirty-first continental congress of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution adjourned yesterday afternoon with an enviable record of achievements chronicled.

Singing of patriotic airs marked the formal closing of the congress. Afterward many of the delegates and alternates departed for their homes. A few of the delegates and all of the national officers, however remained for the windup feature of the congress, a banquet which was held last night in the hall of the nations in the Washington Hotel.

TOBACCO IN KANSAS.

Kansas has a law providing that no certificate to teach shall be given to any candidate who can not pass "a satisfactory examination in the elements of physiology and hygiene, with special reference to the effects of alcoholic stimulants and narcotics upon the human system." The State Superintendent of Schools in Kansas, Miss Lorraine Elizabeth Wooster, holds that this law "bars recommendations for school positions to tobacco users, refuses acceptance of certificates from any institutions where any person, teacher or student, is guilty of that crime, and blacklists all schools and colleges less rigidly moral than those under her control." The man who wishes to teach in Kansas must give up his pipe or cigar, and the woman of like ambition must nip her cigarette habit in the bud. More than this, a school will go on the blacklist if a single student is known to have committed the crime.

The chancellor of Kansas City University, in a protest against the ruling that an institution loses its accredited standing if a single member of it breaks the rule, points out that "we can not enforce the rule after the students leave the campus." That seems unanswerable, but we may be sure Miss Wooster will not find it so. Apparently nothing can weaken her determination to cleanse Kansas of the sin of tobacco, not even if it should be found necessary to provide, regardless of expense, a guardian to follow and watch over each student at all hours wherever he may stray. Some of the reformers of these times appear to be quite ready to make shipwreck of popular liberty if they can thereby gain their particular end, suggesting the policy of cutting off the head in order to cure a pimple on the nose.

AMERICAN BANKER AT HELM.

J. P. Morgan has gone abroad to look into the prospects of floating an international loan for Germany. If it is found to be feasible, with sufficient security, there is no reason in the world why private bankers in this country should not participate. If they do take a share in the operation, the country may rest assured that the proposition is sound, for our financiers are among the most astute in the world. Let us hope that all foreign loans in the future will be managed in a similar manner, and that we have seen an end of advances from the Federal Treasury.

Having failed to secure either debt cancellation or the acceptance of German bonds by the United States in place of bonds from the countries which owe money to this country, the internationalists are now at with a scheme to float a German loan guaranteed by the "allied and associated nations." The money loaned to Germany would, of course, go to pay the reparations debts, which are owed to Great Britain, France and Belgium. Thus the plan is to have the United States guarantee a German loan to furnish money for Europe. That is the nearest the internationalists now hope to get a debt cancellation.

That erstwhile league of nations advocate, David Lawrence, says that financial phases of world reconstruction are developing which may bring the United States into active cooperation with the economic forces of Europe. "May bring," indeed! The fact is that since the signing of the armistice this country, through the government and private capital, has extended credit to Europe to the extent of some $8,000,000,000. If that has not been active cooperation in reconstruction, we'd like to know what would be.

The Prince of Wales is said to have thoroughly enjoyed his lark of pulling a British admiral in a jinrikisha while in Japan, but in the presence of such a spectacle the dignified Japanese officials were simply flabbergasted. The story recalls the amazement of Li Hung Chang when he found that President Cleveland would condescend to go out in a boat and amuse himself in the menial employment of catching fish.

Dr. A. Hrdlicka of the Smithsonian Institution announces that the adult descendants of families which are "three to eight generations born American" have easily distinguishable physical characteristics in common different from those of other groups of citizens. The latter can be truly American in spirit, however, whether they look like the genuine article or not.

Burroughs Club Nature Notes

What do you want to know about Nature subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Dept. of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. What do polar bears live on?
2. Do snakes incubate their eggs?
3. Can I mate a wild goose with a domestic one?

Answers in Monday's Nature Notes.

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Why are spaniel dogs called by that name?

It is said to be a corruption of Hispaniolus, "the Spanish one," as this breed of dogs was brought into England from Spain. Though we think of spaniels chiefly as pet dogs, they were originally hunting dogs and very active. Their tendency to become fat and lazy is the result of having too little work and hard field exercise.

2. Why does a setting hen turn her eggs?

With the object of preventing the yolk from sticking to the shell.

3. Please tell me how to preserve moths and butterflies so that their wings and antennae won't break.

After stretching them properly on a frame, pin specimens in a tight-jointed box with a glass top, and keep the top sealed on. A good many specimens can be kept thus in one tray. The tray should have some napthalene or similar flakes, to repel insects. For individual specimens, Riker mounts are best. They can be bought ready to use from naturalists' supply houses; or similar mounts can be contrived from flat pasteboard boxes such as photograph plates come in. Paste a bit of sheet cork in the center for the butterfly pin to rest in. Layer in cotton batting with napthalene, place the butterfly, and seal with glass top—old negatives will supply cheap glass. Use passepartout paper to bind on the glass.

NEWSPAPER MEN TO VISIT CATSKILLS

Newspaper representatives from every section of New York state as well as from nearby states will have an opportunity of seeing what has been done toward the construction of state highways on May 22-23-24, when as guests of the Circulation Managers' Association of Greater New York and vicinity of which James McKernan of The World is chairman, they will enjoy a three days' tour throughout the Greene county section of the Catskills.

The party will leave New York on May 22, on the steamer Robert A. Snyder, of the Saugerties Evening Line, arriving at Saugerties Tuesday morning, and will travel by auto over the Rip Van Winkle trail which extends from Catskill, through Palenville, Haines Falls, Tannersville and west to Stamford.

This trail leads through the Kaaterskill Clove, the section of the trail from Palenville to Haines Falls, started with a blare of trumpets under Governor Sulzer with convict labor, and completed under Governor Miller last fall. It is said to be the most wonderful scenic tour in the east, and opens up the heart of the Catskills to the automobilist.

The Mohican trail, another unusually beautiful road, extending from Catskill, through Leeds, Cairo, East Windham, Windham, Prattsville (where the extension of the New York water works is under construction), and continuing to Stamford, is nearing completion and will be included in the itinerary of the party, which will be under the personal guidance of Richard S. Barrett of Catskill.

A "Get-Acquainted" dinner will be held at Green Lake, a famous Catskill resort section on Tuesday night, at which many of Catskill's prominent business men and a number of newspaper men will be present.

On Wednesday the party will visit Catskill village, where the members have been welcome visitors for years, and embark at 11 a. m. for their return to New York by the Hudson River Day Line steamer Washington Irving, to complete their tour by the most picturesque boat trip in the world.

OUR eyes have been properly called the windows of our souls and age is the curtain that darkens them. When years of use or strain and neglect have so weakened the eye muscles that they no longer accommodate the retina with the proper focus, an optometrist should be consulted. ESOPUS.

Esopus, May 5.—School meeting to be held on Tuesday evening in the district school house and the following officers were elected: Trustees, J. ——ning; collector, Leslie E. Mott; ——rt, Mr. Lampert.

Quite some excitement prevailed in the village early Tuesday evening when it became apparent that the ——— back of the West Shore ——— was ablaze from base to ——. Men from the village hurried to the place and bravely fought the flames, some of them remaining until 1 o'clock in order to see that the last vestige of fire had disappeared. Fortunately there was not a strong wind blowing else the damage might have been much greater.

Mrs. Peter Scheid returned from a few weeks stay in Brooklyn, on Thursday of this week.

The copious rain which fell on Thursday was very welcome, as the ground was getting quite dry.

MISSOURI SYNOD DIAMOND JUBILEE

Lutherans Congratulated by President Harding—Immanuel Church to Have Appropriate Services.

The American Lutheran Publicity Bureau, New York city, is the official publicity agency of the Missouri Synod of Lutherans. When apprised by this bureau of the approaching diamond jubilee of this body, President Harding sent the following letter:

"The White House, Washington.
March 20, 1922.

My dear Mr. Nickelsburg:

I suppose every American who is sincerely interested in a knowledge of his country's history is bound to be pleased at having brought to his attention a bit of interesting information which he had not previously acquired, concerning some important phase of the national development. Perhaps I should hesitate to acknowledge it, but I am going to be frank and say that until your letter came to me I do not recall ever having learned of the Lutheran migration to the Mississippi valley in 1838. You tell me that this company, inspired by the desire to locate in a country where they could worship in accordance with the dictates of their own consciences, set out from Europe with five vessels, determined to establish a colony of their own in the United States. The parallel between this migration and the voyage of the Mayflower, more than two hundred years earlier, is one which need not be suggested. It merely chances that the Lutheran migration had not been called to my attention, and I doubt if it is as generally known as it deserves to be.

From that beginning developed a great community which has contributed vastly to the material and spiritual development of our country.

It is therefore a pleasure to convey to the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church my congratulations and felicitations on the anniversary of your Diamond Jubilee this year.

Very sincerely,
(Signed) WARREN G HARDING.

Mr. J F E. Nickelsburg,
Business Manager, American Lutheran, 105 East 22nd Street,
New York City."

The Lutheran Church, particularly the branch known as the Missouri Synod, officially "The Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri Ohio and Other States" has been called the "unknown church."

Immanuel Lutheran Church, Livingston street, of this city, extends a cordial invitation to the public to attend its services in connection with the coming anniversary in order that its history and policy may become better known. Services will be held as follows on May 7.

German at 10:30 a. m. Subject: "The Lord Hath Done Great Things With Us"

English at 7:30 p m Subject "Reasons for the Wonderful Growth of the Missouri Synod." This will be a statement and explanation of the doctrine and practice of this branch of the Christian church.

On Tuesday evening, May 9 Pastor William Koepchen of New York city, who has made a specialty of gathering everything available on the early history of the synod, will deliver an illustrated lecture commencing at 7:45

MISS SMITH EDITOR OF COLLEGE YEAR BOOK

Continues Literary Prominence Begun At High School.

At a recent election Miss Agnes Scott Smith was unanimously chosen editor-in-chief of the "Pedagogue," the year book at her college. Miss Smith is a member of the present junior class at State College, Albany, and this is the highest literary honor that it is possible for her college to confer upon her. Ever since she has entered college Miss Smith has shown an active interest in all literary work, being at all times a regular contributor to the "Quarterly," the college literary magazine, of which a year ago she was chosen junior editor. She was a member of the class of 1918 at Kingston High School and at that time was one of the literary editors of the Maroon, treasurer of Prisma, the high school literary society, and a member of the varsity debating team.

INCORPORATIONS FEWER IN APRIL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, May 6, (Special).—Six new corporations were granted charters by the secretary of state from Ulster county during the month of April. These companies had an aggregate capital stock of $295,000.

In the entire state there were 1,534 new concerns chartered, 1,296 of which were from Greater New York. The combined capital stock involved was $53,699,150.

From the standpoint of companies incorporating, April failed to show as strong a tone as March. The total dropped from 1,717 companies to 1,534, with a corresponding decrease in capitalization. The first four months this year, however, are running considerably ahead of the same period in 1921.

THE OFFICE CAT

By Jenkins

Cozie Says.

The poet raved and pulled his hair
His features writhed with pain.
Said he, I'd sing
Of flowers and spring
Of blossoms rare
And balmy air
Of turtledoves
And mortal loves,
But write don't rhyme with rain.

Even if health is wealth, it doesn't pay to swap.

Lil Gee Gee, th' Kingston Vamp, sez:

It's easy for a bowlegged girl to be modest.

He—"Then wear 'em longer."

In the old days when a man wanted to commit suicide, he blew out the gas. Now he steps on it.

We can begin to understand why wimmin are called "Daughters of Eve."

The feller that fills up on modern 'likkers, then adds beefstead 'n onions, peanuts, popcorn, candy, etc., comes under the sayin' "Too many irons in the fire."

There seems to be a lot of nature lovers and outdoor enthusiasts in the county jail. They are always wanting to get out.

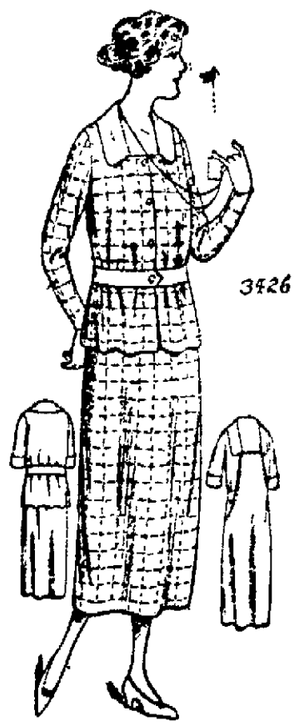
OUR DAILY PATTERN.



A Practical Work or Morning Dress.

Pattern 3426 is here illustrated. It is cut in 7 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. A 38 inch size will require 5⅛ yards of 36 inch material.

This design has good features. The blouse may be slipped under the skirt, and the bib portion arranged over its front in apron style. When not required the bib portion is slipped under the blouse, which worn over the skirt turns the dress into a model which may be worn out of doors for shopping, marketing, etc. The width of the skirt at the foot is about 1¾ yards.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Catalogue Notice.

Send 15c in coin or stamps for our up-to-date fall and winter 1921 catalogue, containing 550 designs of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various, simple stitches), all valuable hints to the home dressmaker.

3 NEGROES GET "TEXAS JUSTICE"

Strapped to Old Plow and Burned to Death as Punishment for Ravishing and Killing School Girl.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Kirvin, Texas, May 6.—Southern "justice" was meted out to three negroes as daylight broke over this little settlement this morning.

While a crowd of 500 men, women and children looked on, they were burned, one by one, in a vacant lot in the business district as punishment for having ravished and murdered Eula Ausley, a 17 year old school girl, Thursday, as she was returning from school.

The negroes had been arrested after searching parties had combed this district Thursday night and all day yesterday.

One of them finally confessed.

The negroes were first mutilated and then burned, each being bound to an old plow around which firewood was stacked.

"Snap" Curry, the negro who made the confession, was the first to be burned.

Strapped to the seat of the plow, under which the fire was started, Terry exclaimed:

"Burn Mose Jones and John Cornish as they are as guilty as I."

The negro displayed a complete lack of fear, and while the flames were leaping up and enveloping his body he sang "Oh, Lord, I am coming." The song suddenly ceased in about five minutes and Curry had gone to his maker. The crowd cheered.

Jones and Cornish were placed in succession on the pile of embers and more fuel added. All three bodies were burned to a crisp.

Since Thursday, when the girl's body was found covered with stab wounds, the throat slashed from ear to ear, and evidences of assault, the entire countryside has been engaged in a sensational hunt.

Curry was captured through the cunning of another negro, Harry Spence. Spence was riding along a country road late yesterday, when he came upon Curry and offered him a "lift."

Curry, not realizing he was suspected, got up behind. As the two were about to pass the home of Homer Miller, a white man, Spence told Curry he wanted a drink of water and went into Miller's house. Almost immediately Miller appeared and covered Curry with a gun and marched him to the Wortham Jail. A mob formed and the negro was slipped out of the back window of the bank building, where he had been taken for safe keeping.

The mob, upon discovering the sheriff's ruse, took up the pursuit and about five miles out of Wortham, overtook the sheriff and his prisoner. The sheriff abandoned his automobile and dashed into a cotton field.

Eluding the mob, Sheriff Mayo rushed the negro to Fairfield. There Curry confessed and involved the two other negroes, Jones and Cornish who were arrested and taken to Fairfield.

The mob hurried to Fairfield, broke into the jail and took the three negroes from the sheriff at the point of revolvers. They were brought back to this place where the lynching followed.

Miss Ausley was a niece of Otis King, mayor of Kirvin.

Two white men were being held at Fairfield today in connection with the murder, having been arrested yesterday. Excitement was still at fever heat and efforts were being made to prevent further mob violence.

Pests.

All near-sighted persons don't wear glasses. New York farmers have almost exterminated blacksnakes. Now they go to the Reptile association of the world, buying snakes at fancy prices, to check field mice and rats that are ruining crops. The snake has his rightful place and function in nature. So have most of the other "pests" which men destroy without reason, to satisfy his repressed lust for killing. Scientists say that each toad is worth $19.44 to a farmer, by reason of the insects and worms that it consumes.

A Linguist.

"My oldest son," remarked Mrs Blunderby, "speaks several languages quite flippantly."

SUITS OF BLUE; HATS OF YELLOW

Color Combinations New Featured by New York Dressmakers and Milliners.

FROCKS PLAIN AND UNADORNED

Some Costume Suits Are Provided With Long or Short Capes—Sport Togs Most Conspicuous of All of Newer Creations.

The American woman does not wait to begin to display her fresh, new spring frocks and suits; already she is beginning to appear in seasonable clothes, which have only just been turned out by those who create these things with young enthusiasm each year.

But, hidden away in the corners of shops and studios, there are more and more lovely things waiting for what are known technically as "the exclusive." They are not too different from the styles of last year, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times, but they are sufficiently changed to have an unmistakable newness of thrill about them.

The discussion and the game of short skirts versus long ones goes merrily on. No one can tell exactly what lengths they are going to be, or are, for that matter. At one fashion showing you will see skirts that cover the ankles and at the next you will see them rising to the knees. The whole performance leaves you with a sense of bewilderment and a feeling that there is nothing reliable in this direction upon which to base your theories of good style. However, it leaves a golden advantage for women to wear their skirts at exactly the lengths they wish and to look their best in the style that best suits them.

As for sleeves—well, as far as evening gowns are concerned, there are none whatever. There are merely apertures where the sleeves should be, and, in the dresses for the new season, these armholes become more and more severe and squared off. They are strangely becoming in spite of their severity, even though one might not expect them to be so. It is a fashion that you become used to and find that your original fears against it were founded upon sand.

In one of the very latest evening gowns there were these plain, carved-out armholes, into which flaring sleeves made of one layer of tulle were set. On the ends of the sleeves three wide bands of crystal bead embroidery were set so that they weighted the layer of nothingness in the most delicate, exquisite fashion.

Of sashes and girdles there are any number, and they are all surprisingly beautiful, for, along with the general simplicity of all of the more formal dresses, there goes this stunning opportunity to make the belt tell the whole story. When the dress is of some dull or indefinite color, then the waistline will, invariably, show some sparkling bit of color that makes the design a thrilling thing.

Unadorned Frocks.

Simplicity is a word that has been used overtime in connection with the newer styles, but really that ideal (even though we can find no better word) has reached the height of its expression in the newer gowns. They are all matters of line and color and cut. Anything else—any trimming or decoration—must necessarily merge into the workings of these general lines if the dress is to be regarded among the best products of the season. At all of the American fashion showings one is astonished to see how very plain and unadorned all of the frocks are. They keep strictly to first principles and, because of that, they are more beautiful than anything that American designers have turned out previously.

The suit has somewhat changed its character, in that, if it is a suit, it is so strictly plain. But then there has come into being this new thing called the costume suit, over which American designers are going quite mad. They are doing marvelous designing and seem to have been inspired by this new turn in the affairs of street clothes.

Some of the costume suits are provided with capes, either long or short. Some of them have wraps that quite cover the frocks underneath, and some of them have little coats that, whether they have sleeves or are made over sleeveless lines, are nevertheless integral parts of the whole costume.

The dresses that are parts of these costume suits are as important by themselves as they are when worn in connection with the wraps designed to go with them. That is part of their charm, and most probably it is the reason why they have proved so extraordinarily popular. You see, when you buy a costume suit, you have not only a street dress, but one which does quite nicely for an indoor dress or for any occasion when it becomes necessary to wear a dress without a coat.

New Figured Silks.

So many times we see the dress for a costume suit made from a combination of some woolen material and silk. Then the wrap will be lined with that same silk, so that the whole arrangement harmonizes in a charming way. The silks are either plain or figured. So much depends upon the general character of the suit, but this is so: That the costume suit has given an excellent opportunity for using these pretty new figured silks, so that they look just right in connection with the whole design. Sometimes a figured silk, if it makes a whole frock, gives a little too much of a pattern, but when it is combined in this way with some plain material it shows off to excellent advantage.

One of the Popular Suits Draped From a Patterned Material.

The sport clothes for spring are, perhaps, the most conspicuous of all of the American creations, for they have developed a character that is entirely unique. They represent the innate personality of the American woman. They tell her particular story of simplicity with the utmost conviction, and there is hardly one among us who does not feel pleasantly at home when wearing clothes of this sort.

The tweed and homespun suits (homespun is the more attractive material for spring and summer) are made in all sorts of bright and interesting colors, and, more than any other of the spring clothes, they carry with them that feeling of the season which every one likes to inject into some part of their wearing apparel. There will be a gray-blue suit worn with a pink hat, or there will be a yellow-tan suit worn with a bright yellow hat, or there will be a combination of a cream-colored suit with a violet hat. And all of these things are so plain and well done that they slip into the scheme of dressing with the utmost ease.

Flower-Garlanded Hats.

Many of the hats turn away from the face and rise into a peak at front, while at the sides they show that graceful curve and droop which brings their lines gracefully curving to meet the shoulders. There are many hats with brims and crowns that are quite plain, but others of them show lace drapings and veils that supply the picturesque touch.

For later in the summer there will be those shade hats that droop all around the face and are trimmed with garlands of flowers, which this year promise to be done in all of the pastel colorings.

Shoes have kept steadily evolving into comfortable lines, until this season we have shoes which are not only comfortable but good looking at the same time. There are brown and tan shoes for wear with sport costumes which are the best looking things ever achieved by the American woman. There are gray shoes made in the same way, with graceful straps over the instep and prettily stitched toes and trimmings.

The shopping bags carried with the new spring clothes are made of bright bits of brocade, of striped and moired silks and of the finest of leathers. They are small things this season, without any more space than is actually necessary to carry those bits of make-up and dollar bills necessary to a day away from home.

PARISH SCHOOLS SOLVE PROBLEM

Lutheran Body Maintains 1,2[illegible] Day Schools Combining Religious and Secular Instruction.

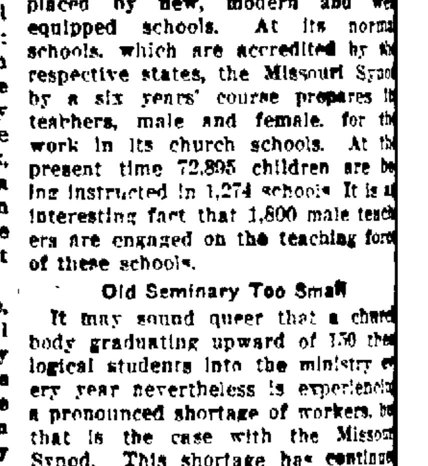
MILLION DOLLAR SEMINARY

New Building on 71 Acre Tract to Provide for 800 Theological Students From 11 Preparatory Schools.

When on April 16 of this year the Synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states celebrates its seventy-fifth anniversary, this Lutheran church body may look back upon three-quarters of a century of extensive and intensive educational work. No sooner had the pioneers of this Synod located in the virgin timber of Missouri when they laid the logs for their first "Concordia College," and the children of these fathers have sought to emulate the spirit.

Parish School System

The problem of giving to children week-day religious instruction, which many non-Lutheran bodies are trying to solve today, has long been solved in the Missouri Synod by its extensive week-day parish school system. While the members of this body believe that the state must establish and maintain the public school, they believe that the children of the church ought to be given what the public school cannot offer them, namely, daily religious training in the school. At great expense the Missouri Synod maintains its system of parish schools for this sole purpose. It gives full courses in all secular branches and strives to make of its children good and useful citizens. Old buildings are being replaced by new, modern and well equipped schools. At its normal schools, which are accredited by the respective states, the Missouri Synod by a six years' course prepares its teachers, male and female, for the work in its church schools. At the present time 72,895 children are being instructed in 1,274 schools. It is an interesting fact that 1,800 male teachers are engaged on the teaching force of these schools.



THE FIRST COLLEGE

Old Seminary Too Small

It may sound queer that a church body graduating upward of 150 theological students into the ministry every year nevertheless is experiencing a pronounced shortage of workers, but that is the case with the Missouri Synod. This shortage has continued for many years and determined efforts are being made to solve the problem. As a result the number of students sent to the Theological Seminary in St. Louis from the eleven preparatory schools has become so great as to necessitate larger buildings. For the scholastic year 1921-1922 close to 450 students were entered at this one seminary, besides 180 at the seminary in Springfield. Accordingly a new million dollar seminary is to be erected in St. Louis. A tract of seventy-one acres opposite Forest Park has been purchased, and the new buildings are expected to be ready for occupancy by the fall of 1924. Last autumn the enrollment of the new students at the preparatory schools was so heavy that one institution had to turn students away and others are overcrowded.

New Appropriations Necessary

In October of last year a new preparatory school was opened in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, and whereas two new colleges are to be founded the delegates to the tri-ennial convention of the Missouri Synod in 1923 will be forced to grapple with the problem of enlarging the educational institutions sufficiently to harbor all the boys and girls seeking to avail themselves of acquiring an education under Christian influences or of preparing themselves for the preaching and teaching professions. In 1920 appropriations were made to enlarge the preparatory school and theological seminary in Porto Alegre, Brazil, and the Lutherans of South America are now expected to supply their own needs without drawing on the number of candidates available for the ministry in this country.

The present officials of the Missouri Synod are: The Rev. F. Pfotenhauer, D. D., of Chicago, president; the Rev. [illegible] Brand of St. Louis, first vice president; the Rev. J. W. Miller of Fort Wayne, second vice president; the Rev. G. [illegible] Bernthal of San Francisco, third vice president; the Rev. H. P. Eckhardt of Pittsburgh, fourth vice president; the Rev. M. F. Kretzmann of Kendallville, Ind., secretary; Mr. E. Seuel of St. Louis, treasurer. These, together with the Rev. William Hagen, Messrs. Benjamine Bosse, Henry W. Horst and Fred Pritzlaff, constitute Synod's Board of Directors.

Livingston Street Lutheran Church from its very beginning has maintained a Lutheran parish school. The school is accredited. The Regents examinations are held at the school and its pupils enter high school. We are happy to have enjoyed during the last few years particularly the cooperation of the public school authorities.

O'CONNOR GETS LIGHTING FRANCHISE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, May 6.—Pine Hill, Ulster county, is to be provided with electric light, heat and power service under an order by the Public Service Commission permitting S. O'Connor to build and operate an electric lighting plant in Pine Hill and to exercise certain rights granted to him by the Pine Hill trustees, the consent of the latter having been approved by the Commission.

Construction of the lighting plant and giving service will, it is estimated, cost about $18,000. O'Connor has a contract to light the Pine Hill streets, only one voter at a special election recently held voting against the village improvement. O'Connor is to construct his plant under certain conditions imposed by the Commission in its order.

TENDLER GETS DECISION OVER JOHNNY DUNDEE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 6.—Lew Tendler, Philadelphia's hard-socking light weight, today had hurdled another obstacle blocking his way to a meeting with Champion Benny Leonard.

The Quaker City mauler decisively whipped Johnny Dundee in their fifteen-round clash in Madison Square Garden last night. The judges' decision awarding the bout to Tendler met with the approval of the crowd, which manifestly had wanted Dundee to win.

LEGION TO OBSERVE MOTHERS' DAY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 6.—"For a year of devotion we have set aside a day of recognition," Hanford MacNider, commander, says in a communication to posts of the American Legion, announcing the observance of Mother's Day, May 14.

Mother's Day will be observed nationally and locally by the 3,500 units of the American Legion Auxiliary, composed of mothers, wives, daughters and sisters of Legion men of the World War. The national effort at observance will be symbolized by an impressive ceremony over the body of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington.

Locally the program of the day includes community church service in the afternoon, to be attended in a body by Legion and auxiliary members; sacred concerts in orphan asylums in which there are children of World War men; visits to hospitals in which there are sick and wounded service men, with programs of music; furnishing of post cards to the disabled, that they may write their mothers, and ceremonies at graves of soldier dead, in honor of their mothers.

Commander MacNider has requested posts of the Legion to fully cooperate with the auxiliary women of proper observance of the day.

NEW CAR Used

What's the Difference?

Suppose you own a new car which you have driven only 7,500 miles. Suppose you and yours decide that you want a larger car, a smaller car, a closed car, an open car, as the case may be. Suppose you know that your car has 75,000 more miles of good stuff left in it. Suppose though that on Monday morning you trade your car in on a new car which will satisfy your personal desires better.

Sunday noon your car was a comparatively new one. But on Monday noon identically the same car, with the same engine, same tires, same everything, has become a used car. Is it any the less capable? Is it any the less good looking? Is it any less comfortable? Has it any less ability to turn hours into minutes, loss into profit, discontent into happiness, or pale cheeks into roses?

Just because, for perfectly sound reasons, you have scratched out the word "new," and substituted the word "used," is that car any less a good automobile than it was just a few hours before? . . . Hardly.

Our used cars were all turned in on new ones for similarly sound reasons.

Cars which are approaching the worn-out stage and which are mechanically unfit, unhealthy, and unsound, are never offered for sale by us. They are accepted in trade at junk prices, and they are steered quickly to the nearest junk heap. Here we have only good used cars, cars which have been thoroughly inspected, cars which we are proud to sell.

For your sake, for your family's sake, and for your pocket-book's sake, we urge you to come and see them.
